Conclusion

Raja Mahendra Pratap was truly an illustrious son of our motherland, a revolutionary and patriot with indomitable zeal for ‘India’s freedom. His contribution to India’s independence movement is second to none. He was a revolutionary, a visionary and a missionary who devoted his entire life to the service of mankind. He was a prolific writer who wrote a large number of books on varied topics. After independence he remained active in propagating his ideas and plans. He was a member of the second Parliament from 1957 to 1962 representing Mathura constituency of Uttar Pradesh. He was also the Chairman of Freedom Fighters Association of India. He died at AIIMS, New Delhi on April 29, 1979 at the age of 93. Raja Mehaendra Pratap should be given his long overdue and privileged place in the history of our freedom movement.
