METHODOLOGY:

This research is predominantly aimed at ascertaining the major causes of stress among banking employees and effective techniques that organisations can apply to manage stress among their employees. The research is analytical and descriptive in nature and includes data collected by primary and secondary sources.