HYPOTHESIS

H01: there will be no significant association between the level of stress and coping strategies among student nurses during their initial clinical practice.

H01: there will be a significant association between level of stress, anxiety, and coping among student nurses during their initial clinical practice.

H02: there will be a significant association between socio demographic variables and level of stress and coping among student nurses during their initial clinical practice.

H03: there will be a significant association between students' stress, anxiety, coping, and teaching strategies followed by the concerned colleges.