Research Methodology

The research methodology used in the study in relation to the research design and the data collection process. The statistical package for the social sciences (SPSS) will be use for the analysis of the collection survey data. In this proposed work includes a discussion on the research design of the study, variables of the study, sampling unit, sample size, and the sampling procedure used in the study and the tools used for the data collection, the validity and reliability of the tools used and the statistical and inferential tools used for the analysis of the data for deriving the results of the study.