WORK PLAN AND METHODOLOGY:

Phase 1:

- Studying historical and current literature on migration from the country.
- Analysing existing studies and data sets
- Writing papers containing detailed country migration profiles, reviewing all data and studies available on migration from, to and through the case study countries.
- Exchange visits of researchers to exchange information, discuss methods and help build research capacities.

Phase 2: Case studies

The case studies will be led by research teams or research scholar from the partner universities with support from the other team or scholar.

Depending on the specific research questions, a combination of qualitative and quantitative empirical research (surveys, non-directive interviews, life histories and participant observation) will be employed.

Phase 3: Data analysis, writing up, workshop and dissemination

Phase 3 will be dedicated to analysing data, writing up the research results and disseminating findings. This will include individual country reports, a synthesis report, working papers and journal articles. During this phase, researchers participating in the Programme will present their findings at national or international academic conferences, workshops and seminars.
